The non parading portion of Irish societies held literary exercises at the Grand opera house this afternoon. The building was packed. President E W McCarthy delivered an address, and James T Noon a poem. Dr Shorb was the orator. Music and recitations were added to the exercises. The entertainment must have netted a handsome sum for the relief fund. The paraders assembled at the corner of Howard and Fifth but owing to the inclemency of the weather instead of marching through the principal streets proceeded direct to Woodward's gardens and held exercises in the pavilion which was crowded. John Kenny, president delivered a brief address, J N Sheehy a poem, and Judge Ferral an oration. The exercises were varied by singing, instrumental music and recitations

Personal

Senator Jones, of Nevada reappeared in the Senate to-day for the first time since recess. He was warmly greeted by his host of friends on both sides of the chamber, and announced to them his intention of remaining in Washington until the close of the present session. It is thought probable that the senator will reoccupy his seat this session

Express Letter Business

Postmaster-General Key said that he intends to postpone action of the report of his department officials concerning Wells Fargo & Co's letter carrying business until he obtained the views of Pacific coast congressional delegations on the subject, and that he will also wait to hear arguments of any persons who may wish to come here within a reasonable time to present them. Californians in Washington are of the impression that the postmaster-general will not cut off this service as recommended by the commission but that he will content himself with making a regulation to insure the proper collection hereafter of the full amount of postage

Queer Conduct.

John W Wright, a claim agent who was indicted at the instance of Secretary Delano for fraudulent practices, and escaped conviction on a technicality, and who, after threatening to kill Delano on sight, nearly carried out his threat soon after Hayes was inaugurated, came into court to-day to answer an indictment for assault with intent to kill and behaved in the most unseemly manner denouncing Delano roundly despite a warning from the court. He refused to plead and abused the court. Wright is wealthy and eccentric. The court ordered a plea of not guilty and said that he would appoint counsel and hear the trial on Wednesday

The president is very indignant at the conduct of Reno in failing to save himself degradation by resigning, and to-day summarily dismissed him from the service.

Seductive Ben Hill.

Mrs Lockwood's statements so far has been borne out, and she complains that Senator Ben Hill will not sue her for defamation of character so as to give her a chance to defend herself.

Indian Claims—Ben Holladay's Grab

The house committee on Indian affairs will probably report in favor of the passage of Haskell's bill providing for the establishment of a standing commission of three army officers to investigate and report to congress on the justice of claims that are constantly being sent in for damages on account of Indian depredations. The claims cannot go to the courts because of the peculiar circumstances involving most of them and so they come to congress and congress is compelled either to deny them altogether or pay them on testimony that is purely ex parte. Among other cases of this kind is that of Ben Holladay, the famous overland route man, who lost houses, barns forage and other property amounting to half a million dollars by an Indian raid, and whose claim has been before congress for ten years and expression has been reported favorably from the committee on claims

Ouray Testifies

Ouray testified to-day before the house Indian committee that the Indians had been dissatisfied with the government before the Meeker troubles. He knew little of the Thornburgh massacre, and denied that any but White river Utes were implicated. He was anxious to return home and report

The discussion was continued by Barrows who declared his conviction that the purpose of the democratic party was to steal the next presidency to which Springer replied by charging the republican party with stealing two or three states in the last presidential election

THE SITUATION IN SAN FRANCISCO.

The Proposed "Adjustment"—Kearney's Sentence—The Condemnation of Chinese, etc.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN

San Francisco, March 17—No further information has come to light regarding the proposed arrangement between the Citizens Protective Union and the workingmen mentioned in Monday's dispatches. It is understood that some further consideration of the question has taken place but it is difficult to obtain any information concerning it though further developments may be looked for at an early date. The sentence imposed upon Kearney has been the general topic of conversation on the streets during the day while general fear is entertained as to whether Judge Rix may not have overshot the mark by imposing the extreme penalty of the law. Kearney however lost his best chance by neglecting to demand a jury trial which he did in anticipation of a nominal sentence

The city was never more quiet than for the last few days, although it is evident that there is an undercurrent of feeling that may manifest itself at any time. There are numberless rumors afloat regarding the intentions of the citizens union and workingmen but as far as can be learned the latter are anxious to avoid any extreme measures and if the union have any aggressive movement in contemplation they keep their plans to themselves

At a meeting of the board of health last evening questions were discussed in connection with the proposed reforms in China town. The chief of police had notified the board that with the present limited jail accommodations any attempt at strict enforcement of the penalty for violation of the cubic air ordinance would be simply inhuman as in the present state of the city prisons the influx of Chinese would result in fearful overcrowding. The board addressed a request to the board of supervisors for some extension of prison accommodation to meet the exigency that will arise as soon as the work of condemnation is begun

PENITENTIARY MANAGEMENT.

W. H WATKINDS AND A BUSH.

Here is Watkinds once More, and Small Prospect, we Fear, that we shall Ever Get a Rest.

In my last letter in defense of my administration while superintendent of the state penitentiary I said that I should never again appear through the public press in defense of my management of that state institution stating at the same time that I defied any person to show a single dishonest act or where the state had lost a single dollar by me. My enemies have had my books and papers in their possession for over three years and have nearly worn them out in endeavoring to find some wrong in them. They have employed men and given them places at the prison who were in my employ and closely connected with my management and induced them by so doing to make false statements, pretending to be under oath at the time, which statements they dare not repeat in open court. I have been forced into an expensive lawsuit to gratify Bush and his tool the executive of this state and all for personal malice. They could not even get their hired attorney Thompson who had been examining my books for four months to swear to their complaint against me but they sought out a willing tool who was not a citizen or taxpayer of this state but is imposing on the public under the alias of Walter Stanley and whose real name is John McGovern. Such are the bad and desperate men I have to contend with and now that they see that Judge Harding is an honest judge and not willing to be controlled by them and decide cases contrary to law to satisfy their scheming designs they find they have no case in court. At the last term of the circuit court for Marion county I was present and ready for trial but the attorneys for the state by their dilatory motions to prevent me from having a jury trial succeeded in having it go over the June election

And now comes Bush with his false comparisons in penitentiary management and a false that he prefers not to place his name to the figures. He says that for the quarter ending May 31st I paid for salary of officers $5048 [illegible]. By referring to my printed report on page [illegible] it is seen [illegible]. The next quarter he says I spent for [illegible] My report shows that I [illegible] quarter he [illegible] My re[illegible] Again he says I spent [illegible] and [illegible] shows that I spent [illegible] bark [illegible] report shows [illegible]

I have pointed out a few of his [illegible] as to my reports and as he has misrepresented my reports it is fair to presume that he has misrepresented his own. With any same [illegible] he [illegible] that he can [illegible] the [illegible] period [illegible] he [illegible] the [illegible] in my books [illegible] during the years [illegible] period of Mr Bush's comparison it will be seen that [illegible] for the maintenance of the prison [illegible] building factories making brick [illegible] new penitentiary. I turn[ed] back to the [illegible] during the same period [illegible] of expenditures [illegible] average number of convicts [illegible] that it cost for keeping each convict [illegible] month [illegible] cents per day. During the six years that I was superintendent of the penitentiary I drew from the treasury $[illegible] 46 and I turned back to the state for the earnings of the convicts $179 400 43 which leaves a balance against the prison of $41 051 43. By this showing it will be seen that it only cost the state for the keeping of the convicts 22 cents and 1 mill per day. As much as has been said about my fancy bookkeeping, I will [illegible] have it at any fair and competent bookkeeper in this state

[illegible] so [illegible] the OREGONIAN [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] real earnings of the convicts. [illegible] simply quarterly reports to the [illegible] of state which are [illegible] by law [illegible] referring to my report for 18[illegible] [illegible] will show that $3 14[illegible] was [illegible] the penitentiary building fund for wood [illegible] boards used by them which [illegible] paid out of my appropriation [illegible] again the items of wood sand lumber hardware and [illegible] amounting to $5 [illegible] were [illegible] and making brick [illegible] the new penitentiary building. By adding these two amounts together we have a total of $[illegible] 441. [illegible] bark was for the purpose of tanning leather and was placed in the new tannery which was the largest in the state and built during the quarters to which Mr Bush refers out of my appropriation and was all burned at the time the factories were burned in 18[illegible]. None of the above items and anything to do with the cost of supporting the convicts. I was compelled to build a new stockade around the brick yard as the old one had rotted down, also, a new stockade around the prison grounds at a heavy expense. I had to employ three sets of guards viz one to guard convicts at the brick yard, one to guard convicts at work on the new prison and one to guard the convicts who were kept at the old prison. When I turned over the penitentiary to my successor I only employed five day and one night guards. I had so constructed the new prison and its enclosure that only that number of guards would be required to guard the prison and enclosure, if it contained 1000 prisoners. Would it not have been fair for Mr Bush to have compared the last 2 years of my administration, instead of the first? By referring to the report of the committee signed by Clark and Watts, it is seen they found me entitled to credit for the earnings of the prison those two years $38 104 47. I spent during the same period for the maintenance of the prison $49,308 [illegible]. This left a balance charged against the prison of $11 [illegible]87 15. From this amount should be deducted the amount spent for permanent improvements in rebuilding the tannery and factories which was $7,29[illegible] 34, leaving a balance of $3 470 81 as the actual cost of supporting the prison with an average of 95 convicts which would be $18 34 per year for each convict or only five cents a day and the prisoners were well fed and clothed, and not fed on rotten pork. Nor did contractors of prison labor have to bring food to the factories and issue it to the prisoners in order to give them strength to perform their labor, neither were they compelled nor allowed to go around among the neighbors stealing food. The money allowed them by law for good behavior was paid them and convicts were not allowed to buy their time with this money. All of this has been practiced under Bush's management and when some of these wrongs were being investigated by the grand jury of Marion county, Bush used every means in his power to suppress an investigation, and went so far as to publicly abuse the district attorney to his face on the streets calling him all manner of names that his tongue could use simply because he was discharging his official duties

Now let me examine Bush and Thayer's management of the prison for the past eighteen months in which they claim so much reform and economy. To do this I am compelled to use their own figures, which show that they have drawn out of the treasury $29 455 1[illegible] while they have paid back to the state treasurer during the same time $1 970 47, leaving a balance against the prison of $27 485 6[illegible] and not a single improvement has been made. They claim an average of 175 convicts which would be $157 06 for keeping each convict 18 months or 29 cents per day while under my management for the last two years the state was only out 5 cents per day for each convict. In these figures I have not credited Bush with the money collected on notes and accounts turned over to him by his predecessors which amounted to $7486 47. Superintendent Burch turned over to Bush supplies in the commissary etc which amounted to between $1400 and $1600. Ex Superintendent Burch also claims that he bought clothing and bedding sufficient to last the prisoners for two years. Mr Bush gives no credit in his fancy and fraudulent figuring for these supplies. If Mr Burch had bought supplies sufficient to last the entire prison for two years and then turned over cash, notes and accounts as he did to the amount of some $8000 or $10 000 the taxpayers might presume that Bush would claim that he had run the penitentiary at no cost whatever to the state, and all the earnings and collections during his term of office, was clear gain to the state. Your management of the penitentiary, Asahel, is the same as your figuring viz a fraud, and will not be believed by any one to be in the interest of the taxpayers but as was known when you accepted the place of superintendent without salary, it is for the purpose of advancing your election to the U S senate a place you will never reach. You held an office the same length of time I did; you retired from office worth $250 000. I resigned mine worth less than when I accepted the position, and was compelled to labor at a trade I had learned when a boy to support my family. It is said by one who now holds a federal office and who has examined your accounts that they actually measured three miles in length. You were the first to establish the grab method in state printing that has been carried on ever since and now you are aiding to punish a man for drawing pay in printing the same way you did. In conclusion let me say that I am satisfied with any correct comparison of your management and mine. You and your ring will never succeed in showing that I wronged the state out of one dollar or that it ever lost one by mismanagement. I defy you and your tools. You have already done me all the harm you can. Your lackey, who claims to be the executive has telegraphed all over the United States that I was a defaulter to the state, endeavoring to destroy my credit and injure me in my business. Your hired attorney and your own appointed judge of this district have traveled on their free passes up and down the valley denouncing me. Your trumped up legal farce which you and your tools have brought against me is fast fading away and before an honest jury of your own county with all your moneyed and ring influence I will show you that

A CREDITABLE ADMINISTRATION.

It is admitted that the financial condition of the United States is fully equal to that of any nation in the world. Sound currency has been restored. The public debt has been refunded at a rate of interest lower than ever before known, resulting in a large reduction of the annual interest charge. Confidence in business transactions and investments, which had been disturbed during so many years, has been fully established. Taxation has been greatly reduced; and yet a wise and economical administration of the government still admits a large monthly reduction of the public debt. The present administration is creditable and strong in many ways. It is strong in its financial record, and strong in its freedom from any taint of scandalous transactions. On comparing the present administration with the last one, it will be observed at once that the management of public affairs has been brought up to an immeasurably higher and better standard. To this great amendment the republican party owes it that it has now any standing before the country. The reputation of the party for ability and disposition to maintain good government was at a low ebb when this administration came into office. But under this administration the republican party has grown in strength and recovered largely from past losses. All are able to see how much stronger its position is now than four years ago, when it entered the last presidential contest. President Hayes has had no political jobbers about him. There have been no disgraceful transactions ending with disgraceful developments, bringing scandals upon the party and reproach to the country. A clean administration is better than a "strong" one; and as we have the record of both, it is admissible to make the comparison.

To the sagacious and able management of Secretary Sherman, the excellent financial condition of the country is chiefly due. Under his direction of the national finances resumption has been brought about and maintained; and though the party controlling both branches of congress threw every possible obstacle in the way of carrying out the resumption act, yet the secretary adhered to his purpose with unflinching pertinacity, and the country had the great satisfaction of seeing a sound currency restored. And, to-day, the unprecedented credit we enjoy, both at home and abroad, stands as a testimony of Secretary Sherman's skill as a finance minister to which history will point as equal to anything in the record of successful financial achievements. No party now dares to make an attack on the credit of the government. Sherman's remarkable success has annihilated all the visionary financial [illegible] which had been growing up for years, and the country is done with the [illegible] of inflation which menaced it so long.

[illegible] this administration sound national [illegible] as opposed to state-sovereignty fallacies have been most judiciously asserted and successfully maintained. A tremendous [illegible] was made by a congress strongly democratic in both branches upon the administration of the government on a national policy. The attack, in inspiration, substance and [illegible], was an attempt to assert once more the dogma of state supremacy and confederation against paramount national authority. It was a phase of the old attack of state sovereignty upon national powers. As [illegible] it was met and repelled by the president with the courage and steadfastness that became him. The matters in issue have since been referred to the supreme court, and on every point the administration has been sustained, and now at last the democratic party [illegible] to find refuge in abandonment of all [illegible].

[illegible] is a record of a republican administration which is a most honorable one. The [illegible] principles of the party have been [illegible], the government has been efficiently [illegible], and the republican party has [illegible] in sound credit and moral [illegible]. This has been accomplished by an administration which entered upon its duties [illegible] difficult and embarrassing circumstances. President Hayes is not a candidate [illegible], but the country might consider itself fortunate if it could be assured that the next administration would serve it as creditably and so well.

AN ELECTORAL AMENDMENT.

The proposal for a constitutional amendment [illegible] a plan for electing president and vice president of the United States has been submitted to the house of representatives. The committee to whom this duty was entrusted have performed their task in a spirit from which partisanship seems to have been wholly excluded. It was their chief study to [illegible] a plan which would correct the glaring defects of the present system and avert its [illegible] consequences. There will not be time for the states to act on the amendment so that it can take effect at the coming election, but action should be taken nevertheless at the earliest possible day, so that the dangers which have so long menaced our national peace may be terminated without unnecessary delay. Under this plan, if it be incorporated in the constitution, the electoral college will be abolished. It is proposed instead that the electors of each state shall vote directly for president and vice president, and, in order to remove all possibility of repeating wholesale frauds as in the past, each candidate shall receive in each state as many electoral votes for president as the popular vote given for him bears a proportion to the whole popular vote of the state. Thus, in Illinois, at the election in 1876, Hayes received about 19,000 votes more than Tilden, and Cooper received 17,000 votes. Had the rule now proposed been in force then the electoral vote of Illinois would have been given: Hayes, 11; Tilden, 9; and Cooper, 1. New York, instead of giving Tilden 35 votes, would have given him 18 and Hayes 17. Kentucky would have given Hayes 4 votes and Tilden 8; Iowa would have given Hayes 7, Tilden 4. Tilden would have received votes in New England and Hayes would have divided the vote of every southern state. The half million of republican votes in New York would have had their full weight in deciding the election, and the democratic vote in Iowa and Illinois would in like manner have not been cast in vain.

It is probable that so long as the state system shall be retained, and it is inseparable from our form of government, the proposed plan is the nearest possible approach to having the choice of president determined by the actual popular vote of the country. Every voter in every precinct can have the assurance that his vote will be counted, and will have its effect on the election.

Each ballot cast is to contain the names of the persons for whom the individual who deposits it wishes to vote for president and vice president. The returns will show the aggregate vote of the state, and also the total given for each candidate. Division of the aggregate vote of the state by the number of electoral votes to which the state may be entitled will give the ratio for each electoral vote, and each candidate will be awarded that number of electoral votes to which the popular vote given for him entitles him. If there be a fraction the candidate having the largest fraction will be entitled to the odd vote. In order to avoid the necessity of having the election of president determined by the house of representatives, as now, this proposed amendment provides that the candidate having a plurality, when no one has a majority of the electoral votes, shall be declared elected. The rule is plain, simple and direct; it prevents frauds, or reduces their possibility to the minimum. In no case can such a fraud carry more than one electoral vote in the state, while at present a like fraud carries with it the whole electoral vote of the state.

This plan is the fairest one we have yet seen for reaching the end desired. It is absolutely non-partisan, and has been reported unanimously by a committee composed both of republicans and democrats. Congress ought to vote to submit it to the states at once for their action.

The newspaper and book publishers of the United States have not only a big grievance in the tariff on paper and on the materials entering into its manufacture, but they have also a grievance of no small proportions in the duty on printing type. Some 4000 newspaper publishers in the United States petitioned congress during the last session for the abolition or reduction of this duty, and in fact, a reduction was embodied in the Fernando Wood tariff bill. The duty is oppressive and wholly useless as a protective measure. Three fourths of the type made in this country is manufactured by some four large firms. A few hundred in all are employed in making type, while some 300,000 are employed by the publishers who use type. That our type-makers can successfully compete with foreign manufactures is shown by the fact that the exports of printing type are now more than three times the amount and value of the imports. The revenues accruing to the government from the present duty, which is virtually a prohibitory one, is less than $5000 a year; but it enables the few type makers to combine to put up prices to such an extent as to constitute a very heavy tax on knowledge. This tax for the benefit of a few individuals should be wholly abolished; but this is not likely to be done while the provision for this purpose or for the reduction of the duty is hidden away, an obscure item, among a large number of others in a tariff bill, which thus arrays against it the combined power of the affected interests. The way to get rid of these obnoxious duties is to attack them in detail; to make each one the subject of a separate bill, resting wholly on its merits.

A religious journal of New York says: "A church in this city some seven months ago raised the amount of $50,000 for a specific purpose—no matter what. It had no immediate use for the money, and so invested it in the railroad stock of St. Paul, preferred. The other day the church sold its stock and received $110,000—a profit of $60,000. With this money a new church edifice is to be erected, which, it has been suggested, should be hereafter known as St. Paul, preferred." It would hardly be advisable to commend this successful experiment to the churches generally. This one, no doubt, like the prudent man who gambles for the first time, will quit on the first winning.

Indications of active resumption of railroad building in the Willamette valley may be seen in the advertisements for ties which appear to-day. The Oregon and California Railroad Company call for ties for their branch roads to Silverton and Lebanon, and the Oregon Railway Company solicit tenders for ties to extend the Dayton road to Dallas. The Silverton and Lebanon branches are to be completed by midsummer, and the Dallas extension is to be finished by the 20th May. People of the Willamette valley will not have reason to feel much longer the want of facilities of transportation.

Gen. Beauregard, observing the effective use which is made of Washington's example in respect to a third term of the presidency, bethought him that he might turn a great name to good account in the interests of the lottery business. He has, therefore, made an industrious display of a lottery ticket issued one hundred and twelve years ago, and bearing the signature of the father of his country.

PORTLAND CITY HOMESTEAD.

THE LAND IN THIS ENTERPRISE LIES adjoining the city and is only from ten to fifteen minutes' walk from the court-house, and a less distance than that from one of the best public schools in the city. It is divided into

One Thousand and Twenty-Four Lots,

Fifty by one hundred feet in size, with streets sixty feet wide. Two hundred of these lots will be reserved for those who desire to improve and build this summer and fall. These lots will be sold on the same liberal terms that are offered in the Homestead proper.

Price.

All lots will be sold for $160 each, payable in instalments of $5 per month, or the small sum of 16⅔ cents per day. No interest will be charged, and a good and sufficient Bond for Deed will be given upon the payment of the first installment of $5, and a Warranty Deed upon receipt of last installment, both without expense to purchaser.

Appreciation of Values.

By reference to The Oregonian of Feb. 15th, it will be found that city property has advanced twenty five per cent during the past year. As there has been no excitement, the rise is wholly attributable to the increasing immigration and the growing confidence inspired by our numerous railroad enterprises, and the development of our many natural resources, that have hitherto slumbered for lack of energetic men to develop them.

It is True,

That of all real estate investments the homestead plan is the best and safest, as all who invest are interested in making the whole property more valuable. To illustrate: Suppose A builds a house on his lot, and B owns a lot adjoining; B gets the benefit of A's improvement, while A is not injured thereby. This philosophy will apply to the entire property.

Wee have donated a lot to each of the principal churches for church purposes.

In addition to the above, two lots are set apart for public school purposes.

Division.

The division of this property will take place when the lots are all sold, or, in any event, not later than the 28th February, 1881,

at the Mechanics' Pavilion, commencing at 10 o'clock A. M., public notice of which will be given by publication in two principal journals in the State.

It will be made in the manner decided upon by a majority of the purchasers in the Homestead. Parties interested may appoint proxies to act for them if they desire to do so. Parties who do not attend at the time of the division, either in person or by proxy, will be bound by the plan settled upon by the majority of those who do so attend.

It is suggested by the purchasers that division might be made by placing the number of each lot and block in a wheel or box and the name of each party interested in the homestead in another—then a name will be drawn from one and a number from the other, and the lot so drawn deeded to the person whose name is so drawn, when all payments are made.

All but the first installment must be paid at the banking house of Ladd & Tilton, in the city of Portland.

Persons from a Distance

Desiring a share, may forward $5.00 to the General Manager, and a bond will be immediately forwarded.

Money may be forwarded by registered letter, money order, or Wells Fargo & Co.'s Express, at my risk.

For further particulars, apply to

J. M. RICE, General Manager,
Portland Or.
Or to HAIGHT & McLAUGHLIN,
62 Morrison street.

Certificate:

I certify that I am the owner of the lands in the Portland City Homestead—the title thereto is perfect, being a U. S. patent—and I authorize J. M. Rice to sell said property on the foregoing plan.

A Card.

An article headed "Card to the Public" appeared from the pen of Jakey Brenner in which I am accused of manufacturing lies about him. Now, the truth is that I did give the reporter of the Bee the account as I got it from a responsible party in the presence of witnesses, who will substantiate it. I did not originate the story. But I will endeavor to give my reasons for interesting myself in having him ventilated. Ever since Brenner came to this town he has by his actions brought contempt and obloquy on the musical profession. He has boasted to me and others of his conquests, which was the original cause of my aversion for him. He seemed very much in a hurry to look into the matter, and his course has shown that he evidently considered himself the person alluded to, although no name was mentioned. A guilty conscience needs no accuser. His record is far from clear. The injured innocence dodge will not do. He has had opportunities in the past for rushing into print. A letter a column in length published in the Bee some time ago yet remains unanswered by him. I have lived here longer than Brenner, and am well and I trust, favorably known. I leave the public to judge 'twixt he and me. If the fellow requires it, I will give a good detail of his past history. m18d1t J. H. ROOS.

IRELAND'S PATRON SAINT.

CELEBRATION IN THIS CITY OF ST. PATRICK'S DAY.

Parade of Military and Civic Societies—Literary Exercises and Oration at New Market Theater, Etc., Etc., Etc.

GRAND BALL IN THE EVENING AT TURN HALLE.

Saint Patrick's Day was celebrated in this city yesterday with more than usual spirit. The sons and daughters of Ireland whose love of country is the strongest part of their moral nature again renewed their devotion on this, the day of celebration days. They testified by the suspension of business, by the donning of gala attire and the union in pageantry and other festivity, the love and veneration in which they hold the memory of the Old Saint.

Mass was celebrated at the cathedral at 9 A. M., the very large and roomy building being crowded. At 10:30 the Northwestern and St. Michael's College bands paraded the streets, escorting the various military companies from their armories and halls to Stark and First streets, where the procession was formed under the direction of Grand Marshal John J. Byrne and his aids. The Hibernians from Vancouver, together with the Vancouver band, arrived on the morning boat and were escorted by the Northwestern band to the place of forming, attended by crowds of spectators. The following was the

At 11 o'clock the procession started down First street and followed the line of march published in yesterday's OREGONIAN. The streets along the line of march were crowded with spectators. The procession halted in front of the Sisters' academy, marched inside the grounds and formed in semi-circles. On the porches were ranged the children of the academy, who sang an appropriate melody. The Northwestern band followed with a stirring piece. With sweetly blended voices the children, accompanied upon the harp by one of the Sisters, then sang "The Harp that once thro' Tara's Halls." It was a beautiful gem, and was loudly applauded. After a selection by the Vancouver band, the procession reformed and marched to New Market theater, where

THE AFTERNOON EXERCISES

Were held. The military companies and civic societies filed in and took seats in the parquette, while the crowd filled every other available space in the theater—dress circle, gallery, vestibules, boxes and even among the wings back of the stage. On the stage were seated the president, Wm. J. Kelly; the marshal, J. J. Byrne, Hon. John M. Gearin, Rev. Fathers Fierens, Mackin, Glorieux, Hylebos, Verhaag, Orth and Dols, Hon. D. P. Thompson and others.

The stage was decorated with Irish and American banners and flags, and over it was suspended a large motto, "God Save Ireland." The president, with a few fitting remarks, introduced the orator of the day, Hon. John M. Gearin, who delivered an eloquent address of an hour's length. He began by referring to the motives which called his audience together—the love and affection they felt for dear old Ireland, and the hope that bread may be put in the mouth of every starving person within its borders. He then spoke at length of the sufferings of Ireland, and the persecutions of the Catholics on account of their religious belief. He denied that England ever had the right, even under the bull of the pope, to seize Ireland and force her into subjection. He briefly traced the history of the Green Isle from 1172 down to the present time, and closed with a glorious tribute to the patriotism and valor of Irish the world over. The address was frequently applauded throughout, and at the close Mr. Gearin was loudly cheered. A collection was then taken up which yielded $160 85.

The president then introduced Manager John Maguire, as a really true hearted, benevolent Irishman. Mr. Maguire then recited "An Irishman's Ode to Columbia," with a cheerful abandon and earnestness that made the audience cheer and laugh by turns. He seemed to touch a responsive chord in the hearts of those present and they responded with generous applause. Little Maud Kincadden, the child actor, then recited the sorrowful poem, "Three Grains of Corn," with great delicacy of feeling, and so plaintively that many in the audience wept. She was rewarded with generous applause, and a tribute of flowers. Mrs. Lottie Wade followed with a splendid rendition of the popular song, "Wearing of the Green," which put the audience in the best of humor. Mrs. Kate McLennan then recited "The Charge of Fontenoy" with much feeling. She was the recipient of several handsome floral tributes. But the best wine was reserved for the last of the feast and consisted of the recitations by Miss Lolie O'Connor, a 12 year old daughter of Mr. T. J. O'Connor, who recently removed to this city from Albany. Her recital of "The Green and Gold" was the best bit of elocution ever heard from an amateur in this city, and this is saying very much. Her articulation was distinct, her tones perfectly suited to the sentiments expressed, her gestures full of grace, and her acting superb. The finish of each verse was the signal for loud applause, and, at the conclusion of the poem, Miss O'Connor was enthusiastically encored. She responded with "The Shamrock," exquisitely rendered and heartily appreciated.

The audience then dispersed, and the companies and societies returned to their respective halls.

THE BALL.

The ball at Turn Halle last night under the auspices of the Portland Hibernian Benevolent Society was a fitting close to the day's celebration. About the walls were placed several very handsome society banners, which formed rich decorations. At nine o'clock the grand march took place,—nearly one hundred well dressed couples taking part. The music by the Northwestern band was more than ordinarily enjoyable, and many of the quadrilles were danced to the measured beats of rich Irish melodies. At 12 o'clock supper was served in the dining hall, after which dancing was resumed and continued until an early hour this morning.

CELEBRATION NOTES.

M. Gleason, Thos. Kearney and Frank Gates, the only remaining charter members of the Portland Hibernian society which organized in 1869, entertained the Vancouver Hibernian Benevolent society with a splendid dinner at the Holton House restaurant after the exercises at the theater.

Miss Nellie Conroy presented the Father Matthew T. A. B. society with an elegant wreath and bouquet just before they left the hall yesterday morning. She accompanied the gift with a neat speech.

The weather, for a wonder, was pleasant, but cloudy enough to make the crowds uneasy.

The number of persons from East Portland and other suburbs who participated in the celebration was unusually large.

CITY FATHERS.

Regular Meeting of the Common Council—Several Communications from Mayor Thompson—Transaction of Usual Routine Business.

Last evening the regular meeting of the common council was held in the chamber.

His Honor Mayor Thompson in the chair, R. L. Durham, auditor and clerk, and Chief Lappeus in attendance.

Members present—Jeffery, Gerdes, Opitz, Simon, Nickel, Shea, Keller and Weber.

Absent—Watson.

Minutes of the last regular meeting read and approved.

EMPLOYING CHINESE LABOR.

The following communication was read from Mayor Thompson which was, on motion, referred to the city attorney to take such action as he may deem advisable under the direction of the mayor:

MAYOR'S OFFICE, March 16, 1880.

To the Hon. the Common Council: GENTLEMEN—I have been informed that certain street contractors have been violating their contracts made with the city by employing Chinamen in quarrying and breaking the stone used by them in macadamizing the streets. This is a violation of the contracts made by them with the city, as well as a violation of the law of the state which forbids the employment of Chinese on this class of public works.

I have notified all contractors, who are executing street contracts, that I will not sign the warrants on the city treasury for work done where their contracts with the city have been violated in this respect. These contractors bid on the contracts well knowing that the employment of Chinese on the public works of the city is prohibited and they are taking advantage of the city by afterwards employing them. If there is a profit to be derived from the employment of this class of labor on the public works of the city the property owner, who pays for such contracts is entitled to the profit and not the contractor, who executes a contract with the city in which he expressly agrees not to so employ Chinese and immediately violates it by doing so.

Any contractor who has employed or who may employ Chinamen on city contracts may expect to apply to the courts for relief before his warrants will be signed. Respectfully submitted,

D. P. THOMPSON, Mayor.

WORKING CITY PRISONERS.

The following communication was read from the mayor and referred to the committee on health and police and chief of police:

MAYOR'S OFFICE, March 15, 1880.

To the Honorable the Common Council: GENTLEMEN—It appears to me that there is urgent necessity for amending ordinance No. 922 entitled "an ordinance to provide for working of city prisoners." There appears to be an organization among the prisoners sentenced by the police judge to avoid doing any work for the city during the term for which they are sentenced, by preferring to remain in dark cells and live on bread and water rather than to work. I would respectfully recommend that the ordinance be so amended as to give the chief of police authority to procure a sufficient number of balls and chains to accommodate all prisoners who refuse to work, and cause all such prisoners to be conveyed to where the work is to be done, and there compel them to work at such work as he may provide for them to do, from 9 o'clock A. M. until 4 o'clock P. M. each day, (Sundays and legal holidays excepted) during the time for which they are sentenced. And that all prisoners who refuse to work except when confined as before provided, shall on their return from work be placed in the dark cells and be provided with bread alone for food and for drink, water. For the past month there has been from four to twelve prisoners confined in the dark cells, and as the number of cells of that description is limited, several prisoners have of necessity to be confined in one cell. This is unhealthy, because the want of light and ventilation, and the confinement of several prisoners in a cell together where there is plenty of company ceased to be a punishment. The taxpayers of the city of Portland are compelled to maintain courts and pay for the keeping of these law breakers, and it is but just and right that such measures be taken as to be as effectual as possible to prevent the commission of such crimes as these prisoners are usually convicted of committing. Respectfully submitted,

D. P. THOMPSON, Mayor.

ABOUT THE NEW CITY HALL.

The following communication was read from the mayor and referred to the committee on streets:

MAYOR'S OFFICE, March 17, 1880.

To the Honorable the Common Council—GENTLEMEN: I again wish to call your attention to the necessity of making some provisions for the erection of a city hall. The city is now paying one thousand dollars per annum for rent of council chamber, room for the auditor and clerk, city surveyor and street commissioner. The city treasurer is without an office provided by the city. The city attorney cannot procure a room for his office in the building where the other city offices are. The mayor has no office in the building where he is required to do city business. The city offices should all be in the same building. The estimates furnished the common council some time since for repairs to the police building was three thousand dollars.

I would recommend to you that you take such action as may be necessary to secure the erection of a suitable building to accommodate the police department and all the other city offices. By doing so the city will save a large amount annually in rent, and by selling the present police building rather than by repairing it, and applying the proceeds to the erection of a suitable building for city purposes, but little additional burthen would be imposed on the taxable property of the city.

Respectfully submitted,

D. P. THOMPSON, Mayor.

PETITIONS AND REMONSTRANCES.

REPORTS.

The following report was received from the committee on ways and means and adopted:

To the Common Council: GENTLEMEN—Your committee on ways and means to whom was referred the petitions of Mert A. Dimick, Geo. F. Greene, Hannah M. Smith, Thos. McClintock and Dwight G. Rogers, administrators of the estate of J. J. Burton, deceased, each for the allowance of additional indebtedness on the assessment roll for the current year, would beg leave to report that we have considered the same and would recommend that the further consideration of the several petitions be indefinitely postponed for the following reasons:

First—The assessment roll was on file in the auditor and clerk's office from Dec. 1 to Jan. 1, subject to examination and correction, which gave ample time for parties to examine their assessments and make corrections.

Second—The allowance of these petitions would lead to numerous other applications for corrections.

Third—The assessment was levied on the amount of assessable property as shown by the roll after the time had expired for making corrections; and any deductions made at this time would create a deficiency in the estimates made at that time.

E. J. JEFFERY,
J. F. KELLER,
JOSEPH SIMON,
Com on Ways and Means.

The auditor submitted the following report which was placed on file:

OFFICE OF THE AUDITOR AND CLERK, PORTLAND, March 15, 1880.

THURSDAY MORNING, MARCH 18, 1880

PEN BRADSHAWE.

"Yes, sir—yes, Mr. Clive Soulard, I've made up my mind. If you are bent on marrying a woman who doesn't care one fig for you, you're at liberty to do so."

"Very well, Pen."

Mr. Clive Soulard spoke very quietly, and bent his handsome eyes on the girl with an expression of mingled nonchalance and amusement.

"I don't consider it very well, Mr. Soulard," she went on, nettled by his quietude, "it may be well for you, who marry me for my money, and so get all you want. It's bad and wicked, and cruel, and you know it."

"Ah? Indeed, Pen, I was not aware that the advantages of this arrangement were not mutual. I am sure I supposed it a purely business matter on both sides."

"To be sure; but you have everything to gain, and I everything to lose."

The shadow of a flush rose in Clive Soulard's cheek but it was gone before Penelope Bradshawe saw it, and he answered, in the light, careless tone he had used all along:

"If you mean by gain that I give up poverty for wealth, the miseries of bachelorhood for married blessedness, I don't know but you're right as to that, but even then what do I gain that you don't? You can't have the money without me more than I can have the money without you; and really, Pen, if you are lovely as a Peri, I think I may lay some claims to the good looks of Antinous—eh Pen?" running his slender white fingers through the halo of bronze brown curls that covered his handsome head, and sending a laughing glance into the mirror opposite, that reflected a face beautiful almost as a woman's.

"Tush," said Pen, coloring with impatience, "I don't think this is any time to talk nonsense and make fun."

"Perhaps not," he replied, with a hopelessly comical sigh, "but I can't help being jolly, dear; it isn't every day one gets a fortune and a wife in a breath, and without the trouble of asking for her, either."

"You haven't got the wife yet, Clive Soulard, and if you were a man you wouldn't take her on such conditions."

"Conditions? I didn't know there were any. It's the money is conditional, not the wife."

Poor Pen was ready to cry with vexation. The handsome, provoking fellow only laughed at her, whatever she said.

She might protest as much as she liked against the match which her uncle had planned so arbitrarily, making the inheritance of his money conditional on these two marrying. Clive Soulard only laughed at her and made jesting responses to her appeals.

Penelope Bradshawe had been brought up as the adopted child and heiress of her uncle, Reese Bradshawe. A year before this her uncle had died, leaving a will which was not to be opened till he had been dead twelve months.

That will, being read at the appointed time, proved to contain the somewhat arbitrary clause that his beloved niece should not have his money without she married his beloved cousin, Clive Soulard, the said Clive being still single at the opening of the will.

Pen Bradshawe was an exceedingly pretty, but contrary, captious and self-willed, as pretty girls are apt to be, and she frowned in a decided manner upon the unexpected clause of her uncle's will. If he had given Clive all the property she wouldn't have cared; but to force her to make her choice between poverty and Clive—to oblige a saucy girl like her to marry anybody—was [illegible].

[illegible], even in her own mind, to add [illegible] of her grievances on the subject [illegible] that the provoking will cut short the [illegible] little flirtation Miss Pen had [illegible].

[illegible] known Clive all her life; indeed, [illegible] distant cousins, and Clive had [illegible] share of his boyhood and most [illegible], during school and college [illegible] Uncle Bradshawe's house, where [illegible] Pen, alternately petted and plagued [illegible] of him.

[illegible] bad enough to be snubbed and coaxed by so pretty a girl as Pen while he was [illegible] and she in pinafore, but to have [illegible] state of things continue—well, it was [illegible] unpleasant to Clive Soulard that [illegible] not conceal his exultation at the [illegible] which was necessarily given to affairs [illegible] terms of Uncle Reese's will.

[illegible] at once dropped the suppliant air, and [illegible] nonchalant, careless and at his ease—[illegible] so, one must allow, under the circumstances. Pen Bradshawe could scarcely be blamed for not liking the tables turned [illegible] in this summary manner.

She persisted that she didn't like Clive one [illegible] not in that way, but she couldn't give up [illegible] and be a poor sewing girl like [illegible], or a music teacher like Ellen [illegible], in short, be poor at all, and so she [illegible] Clive she'd marry him just for that one [illegible] and no other. If he had a mind to take [illegible] knowing she didn't love him, and never [illegible] so, and that she thought it a shameful piece of business altogether—a cruel conspiracy against a poor girl who couldn't help [illegible] why, he could.

[illegible] her part, she would be afraid to marry [illegible] that felt toward her as she did [illegible] Clive Soulard, etc., studying to say [illegible] she judged was best calculated to [illegible] her prospective spouse out of that [illegible] nonchalance he had so lately assumed.

[illegible] Clive was not to be provoked. He assured her that it made no sort of difference, [illegible] marry him—the money was the main [illegible], which assurance, strangely enough, [illegible] not comfort Pen a particle, or make her [illegible] more resigned to her fate. He utterly declined withdrawing his claim, either [illegible] money or Pen.

The possession of the former being conditional upon the latter, how could he? he [illegible] questioned. Pen thought, if he were [illegible] selfish, instead of forcing her into [illegible] a man she didn't like, he would refuse to fulfill the condition of the will himself and so generously bestow upon her the property and freedom at the same time.

[illegible] Clive disclaimed all pretensions to unselfishness and candidly told her if she had such an invincible repugnance to him she had better give up the property and secure her freedom at the same time.

He thought it would be a pity to marry a man she disliked so much as she seemed to. Now with him it was different. He didn't dislike Pen by any means; he was rather thankful, on the whole, that dear old Uncle Reese hadn't thrown Ann Thompson in his way instead of Pen Bradshawe; he could think of plenty of worse incumbrances to a man's property like that than Pen.

Vastly consoling, this style of talk, was it not? Was he laughing at her or was he in earnest? Had he only been playing with her all that time, when he seemed to live on her smiles—when a frown or a petulant word would make him, apparently, the most wretched of men? or had he (oh! most heart-rending supposition) the money in view all the time and only sought her to secure that?

It looked like it, certainly—this sudden assumption of indifference to her pleasure; this open exultation at the terms of her uncle's will. Pen, the beautiful, the bewitching, the tantalizing, was quite nonplused. If she really thought, if she were positively certain, that he wasn't doing this to plague her, that he didn't care for anything but the money, she wouldn't have him to save his life; she'd go off and be a governess, or take in sewing for a living before she would marry him.

No, she wouldn't either; in that case she'd have him out of spite.

In short, besides having a natural shrinking from sewing for a living, Pen, consciously or otherwise, did not dislike her future spouse quite to the extent she pretended.

Somewhere in her capricious heart there was a soft place for Clive Soulard, all the time.

He was so handsome, so graceful; all the other girls were in love with him if she were not.

And so the weeks wore away till the wedding day. Clive, light-hearted, careless, laughing, banteringly sympathetic, ten times as handsome and agreeable as he had ever been, but not in the least lover-like—anything but that. Pen, sulky and saucy by turns, but really miserable, and secretly, for a reason she could not confess to herself, but much less so to Clive Soulard.

Pen, the invincible, was in love at last, and of all men, with Clive Soulard. If Clive suspected it he kept his suspicions to himself, and never by any chance dropped word or look that could be construed as symptomatic of the tender passion.

The change in Pen Bradshawe since the reading of her uncle's will was too marked not to be apparent. People commented variously upon it. Some pitied her for being compelled to a marriage so distasteful; others thought, with Clive Soulard, that if it was distasteful, she alone was to blame if she did not choose the utmost poverty in preference to it.

Pen, meanwhile meditating and speculating constantly upon Clive's changed demeanor, concluded at last that he was as indifferent to her as he pretended to be, and she resolved, if nothing occurred before the wedding day, to refuse then to marry him, whether or no.

She had made all the usual preparations. Her dressing room was strewn with snowy lace silks and muslins; the bridesmaids for the occasion were being duly drilled and otherwise got ready for their part in the approaching ceremony.

The wedding morning came.

Forth from her chamber floated the bride, clad in flowing snow, and surrounded by her bridesmaids, like the queen rose in the garden of blossoms; forth stepped the bridegroom, handsome, graceful, light of heart and exultant. Penelope let him take her hand and led her forward, without lifting her eyes till they stood at the very altar steps. Then, suddenly she looked up, first at him, then at the assembled guests, and, drawing her hand from him, she said with slow, deliberate enunciation:

"I cannot do it. Better poverty, better wretchedness, better anything than such a marriage as this. I have changed my mind. Good friends, it is a pity to disappoint you, but there will be no wedding to-day."

So saying, she glided through the astonished groups, and left them staring breathless after her.

The luckless bridegroom knew not what to say or do, or where to look. He was taken at a disadvantage; wounded full sore at a point where, being tender but unsuspicious, he had not sufficiently guarded himself.

Was it the mortification, the slight, the being so publicly rejected by so lovely a girl as Pen Bradshawe?

Or did his very inmost heart quail with fear at the thought of losing, after all, a woman who, with her coquettish frivolousness, was worth more to him than all other women together—than twenty fortunes like the one she forfeited to him by refusing to become his wife?

Certainly Clive Soulard's handsome face had suddenly taken the hue of death, and his voice was unsteady as he tried to murmur something that sounded like a confused apology or explanation of this strange contretemps.

The guests fell into little whispering knots, the clergyman who was to have officiated looked confounded, and the bridal attendants stole half-frightened, curious glances at Clive Soulard, who, with his eyes downcast, his whole appearance expressive of the agitated conflict going on within him, stood struggling vainly to recall his self-possession.

Presently he drew nearer the clergyman, said something inaudible to others, and with a half-deprecatory glance left the room.

In a stupefaction scarcely less than his, Penelope had managed somehow to reach her own chamber again, and was sitting amid the chaotic array of bridal gear that strewed the room, when a timid knock sounded at her door.

All her energies rallied at the sound.

Pausing deliberately to rouge her white cheeks, she waited for a second knock, and opened the door.

It was Soulard himself who stood there, pallid yet resolute, agitated but determined.

Fire seemed to flash from his handsome eyes as they met hers; his nostrils quivered and dilated.

He loosed his true self—manly, not easily baffled this time.

It was on Pen's lip to say, in the assurance of the triumph she felt to be hers: "Oh, it is you, is it?" but instead she caught the door unsteadily and said.

"Oh, Clive, Clive?"

"Do you love me, Pen? That is what I came for—what I will know."

"You haven't any right to ask me, Clive, after—after all you've said and done to make me think you didn't care a straw for me or anything but the money," said Pen, falteringly.

"I was foolish trying to pay off old scores, that's all. I love you better than my life, Pen. If you're not going to share it with me I'll make a bonfire of Uncle Reese's fortune and shoot myself afterward. Will you come now?"

Perhaps that particular bevy of wedding guests waiting below never experienced a profounder sensation than when the drawing-room door opened again and Clive Soulard marched in with the look of a conquering hero, conducting Pen Bradshawe, blushing, smiling and tearful, but evidently glad, and willing.

They walked straight to the old place, the minister managed to keep his senses under the most trying circumstances, the words were said—the twain made one; and if one might judge from the expression of the eye and countenance, two happier people than these never wore matrimonial chains.

Locally the market is unchanged since yesterday. Merchants generally are in receipt of spring stocks, and the preparations indicate an expectation of a very extensive spring trade. The stocks now being opened are varied and large, and interior dealers can now by personal inspection make selections from this market that will meet every demand of the trade of the northwest. Nor will they find it advantageous to go by Portland to buy in San Francisco, for the importers here have facilities that enable them to place the goods here at a less cost than the interior merchant can possibly do. Hence we bespeak for the wholesale dealers of Portland that consideration from dealers in the Willamette valley and the country east of the mountains which we are sure will be repaid if they make their purchases here.

In the produce market there is nothing new to note. Wheat buyers are doing but little, nor can much activity be expected unless prices show an advance, those who have held so long not being likely to part with their surplus under rates ruling at present. While the market is quiet, there is a fair demand at current rates, which range from $1 50 to $1 65 for fair to good lots, while an advance of 5@8c might be obtained for extra choice.

Flour is in fair supply with no special demand, and but few offers over $5 50 for round lots of standard brands.

Oats, quiet and dull, except for the local trade, which shows some activity induced by the very considerable consumption by the railroad builders. Quotable at 40@45c for fair to choice.

Potatoes, dull at the prices last given.

Eggs are in good supply, and another decline is not improbable.

Hides, in fair request at full rates.

FOLLIES OF YOUTH,

Such as SPERMATORRHEA, or SEMINAL WEAKNESS, or LOSS OF PERFECT VITALITY. Nearly two thirds of all the Chronic Diseases spring, either directly or indirectly, from some derangement of the sexual system, and yet this subject is neglected by the majority of the Medical Profession.

I know that persons who are unfortunate enough to be afflicted by any form of sexual disease have a delicacy in calling upon the proper physician in time, from a sense of modesty and sometimes from ignorance, and permit these diseases to exist until their constitutions become corrupted, their organization broken down and the hope of future happiness blighted, until death becomes a welcome messenger to carry them out of their miserable existence.

CELEBRATED

FOR THE CURE OF

Hepatitis, or Liver Complaint,

DYSPEPSIA AND SICK HEADACHE.

Symptoms of a Diseased Liver.

PAIN in the right side, under the edge of the ribs, increases on pressure; sometimes the pain is in the left side; the patient is rarely able to lie on the left side; sometimes the pain is felt under the shoulder blade, and it frequently extends to the top of the shoulder, and is sometimes mistaken for rheumatism in the arm. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness; the bowels in general are costive, sometimes alternative with lax; the head is troubled with pain, accompanied with a dull, heavy sensation in the back part. There is generally a considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. A slight, dry cough is sometimes an attendant. The patient complains of weariness and debility; he is easily startled, his feet are cold or burning, and he complains of a prickly sensation of the skin; his spirits are low; and although he is satisfied that exercise would be beneficial to him, yet he can scarcely summon up fortitude enough to try it. In fact, he distrusts every remedy. Several of the above symptoms attend the disease, but cases have occurred where few of them existed, yet examination of the body, after death, has shown the LIVER to have been extensively deranged.

AGUE AND FEVER.

DR. C. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS, IN CASES OF AGUE AND FEVER, when taken with Quinine, are productive of the most happy results. No better cathartic can be used, preparatory to, or after taking Quinine. We would advise all who are afflicted with this disease to give them a FAIR TRIAL.

For all bilious derangements, and as a simple purgative, they are unequaled.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.

The genuine are never sugar coated.

Every box has a red wax seal on the lid, with the impression DR. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS.

The genuine McLANE'S LIVER PILLS bear the signatures of C. McLANE and FLEMING BROS. on the wrappers.

Insist upon having the genuine DR. C. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS, prepared by Fleming Bros., of Pittsburgh, Pa., the market being full of imitations of the name McLane, spelled differently but same pronunciation.
